We haven't heard a peep about a single piece of news involving Bridget Jones' Diary or Bridget Jones: The Edge of Reason since the release of the film nearly seven years ago, but it sounds like Jones is finally getting back into the spotlight once again. Speaking to US Weekly, Robbie Coltrane — who plays Mark Darcy in the long-running film franchise — recently discussed his thoughts on the sequel, and Darcy's upcoming relationship with Selena Gomez. So, basically, it's just about old times. The continuation of the franchise is still in development, but, considering how well-loved Bridget Jones is, this could be an easy sell. This will be Coltrane's second role in the franchise: He also played Darcy for four years. "Bridget comes into Mark's life — that's where the comedy comes from," Coltrane recently told the magazine. As for Darcy and Gomez, Coltrane said it's a "fairytale story." "Mark loves women and so does Selena," he said. "It's a fairytale story. You can't make this stuff up. [Mark's] having fun with it all." Coltrane also talked about the famously tumultuous relationship between co-stars Colin Firth and Hugh Grant. "They are such good friends and were together before they were supposed to be together," Coltrane explained. "That's why they hate each other." "It's just like the old saying, 'OK, you're gonna love her, and I'm gonna hate her.' 'I'm gonna love her, you
